 Mark from the Tomb—Another Ancient Mummy Speaks!
 Henry S. Foote has sent a column of abuse of Jeff Davis, his ancient foe, to a Memphis paper. It is very wordy. The following is an extract:
 "Let me tell Mr. Jefferson Davis and his satellites that I know them only too well. My character is not in reach of such arrows of defamation as they have at their command, and that it is not even in their power to disturb my serenity for a moment. I have but little more to say of Mr. Davis himself for the present, except to admonish him to the exercise of a little more prudence in the future than he has lately put in practice. The people of the South know that he was struggling for more than twenty years to establish himself in civil war before he could effect his object, that when the war was finally brought on he shamefully abused all the powers entrusted to him; that he evinced the most disgraceful incompetency in his whole management of Confederate concerns; that he heartlessly persecuted many of the best Generals; evinced on all occasions the lowest and most selfishness; cruelly protected the war beyond all reason; able limits; setting his face against all terms of peace to the last moment, which did not include his own retention of power, thus bringing himself responsible for most of the devastation and suffering that the unfortunate South has had to endure. Let me further say to Mr. Davis that he is the very last man in the South to whom the people of this region would now look for help and military counsel; that they would never follow him into another insane and unprovoked war; and that when he denounces them by wholesale for acquiescing in the inevitable results of a condition of which he was the chief contriver as 'fools or cowards,' he places himself in a predicament in which every patriotic and high spirited man will be inclined to sit in frowning upon him the indelible brand of a deserved infamy. I regret to have been compelled to notice this contemptible affair at all; but having done so, I could not say any less than I have said."
 H. S. Foote.
